Comment Lovely village! My g-g-great-grandfather George Day emigrated from there to Georgia in the 1840\'s & I was interested to see where my ancestors were from. Hope to visit someday...

Comment I owe my knowledge to Nigel Osborne of New Zealand who set me on the trail of my maternal grandfather, Henry Edward Drury. My late mother knew almost nothing of him but he and his family came from the Old Workhouse. He died at Les Rues des Vignes on 1.12.1917 (WWI). His brothers and sisters\' families have now contacted each other. He was apprenticed to a Barber in Pontlottyn - a South Wales mining village. From Biddenden it must have been a traumatic experience. Lovely village and I must get a video together on youtube to show it off.

Comment I have been researching the Henden family tree and see that some originated from Biddenden. I have not visited the town myself but would love to if I get back to the U.K. As a matter of interest I live approximately 90km's from a town called Tenterden in W.A. also we have a shire close by called Kent and another called Plantagenet. Quite amazing that I live so close to familiar names of towns near where my family may of originated from.

Comment My mother, Muriel James, died today at the age of 91. She lived in Biddenden during World War II until 1947 and then from 1953 until 1972 when she moved to Peacehaven. I recognise a couple of names from the guest book as people I went to school with, that seems a lifetime ago. I left Biddenden in 1970 but I still come back about once a year to put flowers on my grandparents grave. It has changed a lot from the village I grew up in.
